Spring 2016

From the Editor / "Sunset in the Sahara"

Catherine Preysner
Lehigh University

Follow this and additional works at: http://preserve.lehigh.edu/cas-lehighreview-vol-24

Recommended Citation
Preysner, Catherine, "From the Editor / "Sunset in the Sahara"" (2016). Volume 24 - 2016. 3.
http://preserve.lehigh.edu/cas-lehighreview-vol-24/3

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Lehigh Review at Lehigh Preserve. It has been accepted for inclusion in Volume 24 - 2016 by an authorized administrator of Lehigh Preserve. For more information, please contact preserve@lehigh.edu.
I am honored to present to you the twenty-fourth volume of the Lehigh Review: Reawakening. The creation of this journal over the past three months has been both a challenging and rewarding experience. The volume you hold in your hands could not have been published without collaboration and teamwork between our editing staff, authors, artists, and faculty supporters. I cannot thank them enough for their hard work and dedication.

The mission of the Lehigh Review is to seek out and showcase the best undergraduate scholarly writing and artwork at Lehigh, and Reawakening is no exception. Our authors have shed new light and brought original perspectives to existing dialogues in ways that reawaken our minds and encourage us to join the conversation.

About the Origin: Is Mathematics Discovered or Invented? questions our perceptions about math and its role in our universe. In The Sound of Tomorrow: Soulection and the Era of Cultural Curation, we see how technology has reawakened and redefined the artist-consumer relationship and how one company has responded.

We join both new and existing conversations about global health issues in both The Impact of Number of Physicians on Infant Mortality across Nations and Mental Health and Religious Beliefs in Ghana: An Intersection between Faith and Science. Our perceptions about the use of color are challenged in Art & Race: It’s Not Just Black & White in a fashion that reawakens conversations about slavery and race in America. Lastly, we see the physical reawakening and rebirth of the Fishtown section of Philadelphia in Urban Renewal and the Struggles of Gentrification in Fishtown, Philadelphia.

The pieces are unique in style and discipline, but each one masterfully interweaves quality research with original thought to produce a sample of the best scholarly writing being done at Lehigh. Similarly, our artists showcase a variety of mediums and subject matter that reawaken our senses and provide a taste of the rich creative juices flowing through Lehigh’s undergraduate student body. It is my hope that the contents of this journal not only inspire you to reawaken your mind and join the conversation, but also to appreciate the exceptional work being done by Lehigh students, for they are the leaders of tomorrow.

Catherine Preysner
Editor-in-Chief
I am honored to present to you the twenty-fourth volume of the Lehigh Review: Reawakening. The creation of this journal over the past three months has been both a challenging and rewarding experience. The volume you hold in your hands could not have been published without collaboration and teamwork between our editing staff, authors, artists, and faculty supporters. I cannot thank them enough for their hard work and dedication.

The mission of the Lehigh Review is to seek out and showcase the best undergraduate scholarly writing and artwork at Lehigh, and Reawakening is no exception. Our authors have shed new light and brought original perspectives to existing dialogues in ways that reawaken our minds and encourage us to join the conversation. About the Origin: Is Mathematics Discovered or Invented? questions our perceptions about math and its role in our universe. In The Sound of Tomorrow: Soulection and the Era of Cultural Curation, we see how technology has reawakened and redefined the artist-consumer relationship and how one company has responded. We join both new and existing conversations about global health issues in both The Impact of Number of Physicians on Infant Mortality across Nations and Mental Health and Religious Beliefs in Ghana: An Intersection between Faith and Science. Our perceptions about the use of color are challenged in Art & Race: It’s Not Just Black & White in a fashion that reawakens conversations about slavery and race in America. Lastly, we see the physical reawakening and rebirth of the Fishtown section of Philadelphia in Urban Renewal and the Struggles of Gentrification in Fishtown, Philadelphia.

The pieces are unique in style and discipline, but each one masterfully intertwines quality research with original thought to produce a sample of the best scholarly writing being done at Lehigh. Similarly, our artists showcase a variety of mediums and subject matter that reawaken our senses and provide a taste of the rich creative juices flowing through Lehigh’s undergraduate student body. It is my hope that the contents of this journal not only inspire you to reawaken your mind and join the conversation, but also to appreciate the exceptional work being done by Lehigh students, for they are the leaders of tomorrow.

SUNSET IN THE SAHARA
Sarah Berman

Catherine Preysner
Editor-in-Chief