The purpose of the Lehigh University Art Galleries is to manage, develop and care for the university's permanent art collection, and, at the same time, to create and to bring to the Lehigh Valley exhibitions and programs that expand community awareness of the visual arts, humanities, science and technology. All events and programs are open to the public. In addition, there are opportunities for formal study in the visual arts and museum studies.

Sometimes unexpected changes are necessary in the opening and closing of an exhibition, so please verify all dates. Guided tours of these exhibitions for schools and special groups may be arranged through the L.U. Art Galleries.

28th ANNUAL CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN ART EXHIBITION ART AND TECHNOLOGY: OFFSET PRINTS

An exhibition of offset lithographs demonstrating creative uses of offset printing technology and the various ways it has been wedded to individual artists' needs and vision. Offset, a medium often connected with commercial printing, is used here by artists, including some acknowledged contemporary masters, to produce original, limited-edition, fine art prints.

ART AND TECHNOLOGY: HAROLD EDGERTON, Photography

The inventions of Dr. Harold E. Edgerton touch our lives daily. His perfection of the stroboscope in 1900 produced ultra-high speed photography, for which the strobe and the flash microscope are indispensable in many areas of science, medicine, and industry. His genius continues to break barriers in research as well as contributing greatly to fine art photography.

THE AESTHETICS OF TECHNOLOGY: FROM THE CRYSTAL PALACE TO THE HIGH FRONTIER

With the maturation in the mid-19th century of the Industrial Revolution, there began to emerge a perception of a new aesthetic in the artifacts created by the new technologies. This perception first found expression in industrial expositions and fairs, then in the marketplace of commodities and ideas, and finally achieved recognition from the art world itself.

PLACES OF RITUAL IN ITALIAN ARCHITECTURE

Renaissance Society had a wealth of rituals of one sort or another. From church to palace to piazza, people often met one another in formalized situations. In order to provide a stage for these events, Italian architects had to understand what kind of meetings needed to take place. This show will illustrate some ritual places and describe the kinds of rituals that took place there.
